(English Edition):

Kurzbeschreibung Victorias lived a lie all her life, and she finds out at the worst time: when her lover proposes marriage. Raised by an unfeeling mother, Victoria finds solace in her loving nanny, Shirley, until her unfortunate death. Nursing cancer patients is Victorias passion, seeded by caring for Shirley during her battle with the disease. But the hospital no longer gives Victoria the spark it once did after a muddled affair with a doctor, fueling hatred her colleagues already have for her, so she applies for and is granted a job in home health care. To her surprise and delight, Victoria already knows her first patient. But soon it becomes a convoluted mess when lines are crossed and she has to make a choice whether to end the care for this particular patient, or end her job in its infancy. After a tragic accident, Victoria finds herself as the patient, precariously clinging to life as her family prays for her. The lies that have been told to Victoria soon come into light when her own mother refuses to give blood, even if it means saving her daughter. Why does her mother seem to hate her? Thankfully Shirley has left behind ways to tell Victoria the truth. But will she learn the truth before its too late? Canadian born and married for ten years, Sandy lives with her husband, two daughters and an eleven pound cat.
