Mary Higgins Clark at her bestVon Avid readerHaving read Weep No More, My Lady at least three times and being an avid Higgins Clark reader, I have to say that Mary Higgins Clark definitely put her best work into said book. The plot intrigued me like no other book of hers I have ever read. In Weep No More, My Lady, Elizabeth Lange, a young actress, is grieving over her sister's death more than one year later. Her sister, Leila LaSalle, was murdered at her New York apartment. Preparing to testify against her dead sister's fiancée following his murder indictment in the case, an old friend of hers and accused murderer, Ted Winters, invites her to stay at lovely Cypress Point Spa in California-while Ted is also staying there. Her stay at the spa allows Elizabeth to dwell on her testimony and ponder whether or not it is accurate. As Elizabeth begins to unveil the truth, she is faced with danger. A great book-I definitely recommend this to any Mary Higgins Clark or general suspense fan. A definite page-turner. I could not set this book down!

At first, I tried reading some old classic novel, but I just couldn't get into it. Then I picked up this book that my grandmother gave me and I could not stop reading it. It was so suspenseful and intriguing that I just had to keep reading. All of the characters had some aspect about their personalities that made you think that they were the killer. The questions of Who? and Why? are always in your mind. The setting is a luxurious spa in California (one that I wouldn't mind visiting if it actually existed) and it always keeps you interested. This is why I like these kinds of books. Mary Higgins Clark, Sidney Sheldon, Jonathon Kellerman - they are all great suspense writers who know how to tell a great suspense story. Which is perfect for this time of year: it's summer and you want a book that will keep you occupied throughout the story and that is what this book does.

Von Ein Kunde WEEP NO MORE MY LADY by Mary Higgins Clark Bantam Doubleday Dell Publishing Group, Inc. 1987 360 pages Elizabeth Lange, sister of the famous Leila LaSalle, was determined to put the actress's killer in prison. Leila had become depressed and moody after receiving a series of poison-pen letters which led her to drinking. At this point in time, suicide seemed a legitimate escape, that is until a witness came forth claiming she saw Leila struggle with her boyfriend, Ted Winters. It was then that Elizabeth began thinking about the conversation she held with her Leila the night of her death, and more closely, the voices she heard in the background. After going over her testimony for the trial against Ted, she reluctantly decided to accept an offer to Cypress Point Spa. Min, a close friend of Elizabeth and Leila, insisted she come and relax. Little did Elizabeth know she was going to be put face to face with her sister's killer, as well as many other suspects, all of which were friends of her's. This novel was very enjoyable to read; also a true page-turner. If you have ever read any other novel by Clark, you will find this novel as exciting as many of her others. If not, this novel would be a great Clark novel to start out with. She tends to change the narrator quite often and this change may confuse some readers. This may not be a problem, and if not, this novel should be a perfect one for many who enjoy suspense mysteries. I highly recommend this novel; read Mary Higgins Clark's Weep No More My Lady and find out who was the killer of Leila LaSalle. ~Reviewed by Gemma Patel~
