Refreshing Victorian romance set in MonacoVon Ein KundeIn 1875 France, the Earl of Barrington, Nicholas Duvall is renowned for his indolent, and arrogant behavior. However, the "Lord of Scandal" as he has been called, is growing bored of the charade he portrays to his peers. However, Nicholas accepts a wager offered by Philip Montrove. Nicholas must pretend to be a coach driver, who offers his services to several stranded passengers. If he takes them to Monaco, he wins the bet. He ponders whether accepting the wager will interfere with his quest to uncover a killer. Deciding no, he agrees. Nicholas turns to the passengers and ends up negotiating with Katya Alexander, who desperately needs to get to Monaco. Katya needs to learn who killed her parents whose jewels were taken by an aristocratic passenger. After receiving a warning by Nicholas, she deftly retrieves her jewels back from the thief. Nicholas convinces Katya to help him find a missing scroll. As they work together, the duo falls in love, but they are descendants from feuding families, leaving no hope for a future together even if they complete their personal quests. Readers need to provide themselves adequate time when they begin WHAT WILD MOONLIGHT in order to avoid sleep deprivation because this is a one sitting tale. The action-packed story line is suspense at its most intense. The characters are charming and placing this Victorian couple in the new aristocratic playpen of Monte Carlo adds freshness to the novel. Victoria Lynne will capture the attention of the reader chasing rainbows in their historical romances.

ber den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende
Victoria Lynne grew up loving to read, but considered it only a hobby. With a business degree firmly in hand, she set out to do something with her life. But after attempting a variety of careers, she was back to where she started: books. From the first day she picked up a pencil and a legal pad and began scribbling away, she knew she had finally found her calling. Fortunately, fate has smiled on that calling. Victoria has twice been a finalist for the Romance Writers of America's prestigious RITA award, and has also been nominated for the Romantic Times er's Choice Award. What Wild Moonlight is her fourth novel. Victoria lives in Virginia with her husband and son, and loves to hear from readers. Please write to her at P.O. Box 246, Fairfax, Va 22030.
