KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen1 von 1 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. ein geniales BuchVon JakobaH. Lowell hat mit diesem Buch eine Glanzleistung vollbracht.Zur Geschichte:Marie-Claire wird nach dem Besuch eines Partnervermittlungsinstitutes Zeugin eines Mordes. Sie rennt weg, Isst dabei aber ihre Handtasche am Tator liegen. Auf Ihrer Flucht schlggt Sie mit dem Kopf auf und wird ins Krankenhaus gebracht. Als Sie im Krankenhaus erwacht trifft sie auf den zustndigen Detective fr diesen Serienkiller: Sean. Leider kann sich Claire nicht an die besagte Nacht oder an das Gesicht des Killers erinnern. Die beiden begeben sich daher zusammen auf die Suche nach dem unbekanntem Killer.Auch die Nebencharaktere - Sean's Cousin Aidan, Claire's Freundinnen Afton und Olivia - sind sehr vielschichtig und liebevoll beschrieben.Ein wirklich super Buch.Weiter so Heather

Lowell!!!!

KurzbeschreibungA serial killer has one obsession . . .Claire Lambert walked into a nightmare on a rainy night in Washington, D.C. Stumbling upon a killer in the midst of his latest bloody crime, she ran for her life -- but not before a head injury caused her to lose her memory, along with her purse and ID. Now a monster knows who Claire is . . . and where she lives.Waking up in a hospital room the day after being attacked -- her mind stripped of all memory of what happened to her -- Claire can only listen with horror to the scenario Detective Sean Richter unfolds before her. A law officer fiercely dedicated to ending the wave of brutal killings that has struck the city, Sean knows that this brave and beautiful woman holds the key to stopping the murderer before he can strike again. Claire is the only victim who has seen the killer's face and lived -- which is why Sean needs her help and will risk everything to protect her . . .And why a depraved, relentless animal is determined that Claire Lambert must die.

ber den Autor und weitere MitwirkendeHeather Lowell was born and raised in Southern California. She attended Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., where she began her love affair with foreign languages, international politics, and off-the-beaten-path travel. She's journeyed by bus, train, and boat throughout the developing world, meeting local people and practicing her language skills -- the occasional face-to-face encounter with livestock was an added bonus. While her "list of things to do before settling down" is still quite long, Heather has already crossed off hiking the Andes, going up the River, backpacking through Australia and New Zealand, SCUBA diving, bungee jumping, white-water rafting, caving, and jumping out of an airplane.In the 1990s, Heather studied in Brazil, volunteered as an English teacher in Hungary, and earned a Master's degree in International Development. She briefly considered becoming a professional traveler before deciding that defaulting on her student loans wasn't a lofty career goal. Instead, she served her time in a cubicle as a project manager in Information Technology, where her life closely paralleled that of the comic strip Dilbert. When the tech bubble burst and the stock market plummeted, Heather took it as a sign that she should get out of the corporate world and follow her dream of writing. She hasn't looked back since that day.Despite an adventurous past, Heather Lowell now considers herself to be a dedicated homebody -- with a car, mortgage, and dog to prove it. She currently lives in Arizona, where she is working on her next book.
