A little far-fetched, I thinkVon Peter BerlinThe thriller as such is quite entertaining in its own way. Clark spends a little too much time on describing what the individual characters like to wear and eat. True, the novel takes place in the fashion world, still it does not seem necessary to describe the characters through the clothes they wear. We have a young heroine, all the rage of the big apple's fashion world, who meets her lover a little too soon the game. Clark's characters are usually flat, here they seem unusually flat and almost a bit too boring and predictable. The book could have been shortened and that would increase its impact. I felt it a bit long-winded in places. The solution is a little bit far-fetched and makes you wonder how this character of all people would make the murderer. It seems best not to examine the novel too closely in that respect. The final showdown was a little too orchestrated when suddenly three people at the same time realize who the murderer must be and storm off to the same place to prevent the heroine from being murdered. It is okay to read but don't rush, Clark has written better stuff.

KurzbeschreibungGossip columnist Ethel Lambston knew everything about everybody who was somebody, and her forthcoming book is about to expose the leading figures in the fashion world. So there are more than enough suspects when she is found murdered, her throat slashed. For Neeve Kearny, the owner of an exclusive New York boutique, the killing of one of her best customers has eerie echoes of another death that occurred many years earlier- the murder of her own mother. Are the two deaths linked? Suddenly Neeve is plunged into the mystery of Ethel's murder, following a trail that leads from the glittering pleasure palaces of New York's rich and beautiful to the Mafia underworld. And who is the killer who reckons that anyone as inquisitive as Neeve deserves to die?Pressestimmen"The first murder is only the start of the terror..."
